

Driving hard to change lives

£163

can give a person with cancer eight weeks of one-to-one support with our Macmillan Buddies volunteers who provide expert emotional support over the phone, online and face-to-face.

£270

could pay for 600 copies of The Cancer Guide. This Macmillan booklet can help someone recently diagnosed with cancer and their families, understand more about cancer, its treatment, and the help available.

£300

is the value of a one-off Macmillan Grant that people living with cancer can receive to help with the associated costs of a diagnosis. This money can help with hospital travel, clothing, and food to help support their families.

£1,200

can cover the costs to provide a specialist Macmillan Nurse for one week of expert physical and emotional support for someone living with cancer.

£6,100

in fundraising could help power our Energy Advice Team for one week. This vital online and phone service helps people living with cancer keep warm and save money during the financial difficulty a diagnosis can bring.

How it helps

The Longest Day Golf Challenge is 'the people's major' of Macmillan fundraising challenge events. A great-cause golf marathon to raise money for people facing cancer.

Playing the Longest Day Golf Challenge and raising money for people with cancer can help thousands of people live their life better during their diagnosis journey. It can help people afford the cost of transport to their appointments, it can help them support their families while they are out of work, and it can keep them focused on their health journey instead of their financial pressures.

The Longest Day Golf Challenge is not just a game. It's much more important than that.

Four in five people with cancer are, on average, up to £891 per month worse off because of their diagnosis.
