Talking about cancer and your feelings

About this easy read booklet

This booklet is about how you can talk about cancer and share your feelings about it.

You can learn about how talking about cancer can help you.

If you are worried about your health, you should talk to a doctor or nurse.

Why talk about cancer?

Talking about cancer can be hard.

You might worry about upsetting other people.

You might be scared to talk about cancer.

You might find it hard to say how you feel to other people.

But talking about cancer can really help.

It can help you to:

- find out how you are feeling and tell other people

- feel less alone

- feel less worried or scared

- ask for any help that you need

- feel supported by family and friends.

Who can I talk to?

Talk to someone you trust and feel safe with. This could be:

- someone in your family

- your partner

- a close friend

- a religious leader

- someone you work with

- your carer or someone who normally supports you.

Talking to family and friends

Talking to your family and friends about cancer can be hard. You might worry about upsetting them.

But if you tell them about the cancer and how you are feeling, they will normally want to help you.

Here are some tips for talking to family and friends about cancer.

Think about who you want to talk to. It should be someone you trust.

It is better if you meet in a quiet place where you can sit and talk.

Think about what you want to tell them.

You might want to tell them:

- what you know about your cancer

- how you are feeling about it

- what you are worried about

- what you would like help with.

Sometimes, people say things like “Don’t worry, everything will be OK”.

People may want to stop you getting upset. But if you feel upset, this is normal and it is OK to say how you feel.

It is not good to keep quiet and pretend you feel OK if you do not.

Talking to healthcare professionals

Remember, you can talk to the doctors and nurses at the hospital about how you are feeling.

They are good at helping people with cancer. They know about the problems and worries you may have.

Before you see your doctor or nurse, try to think about what you want to say or ask.

You could take someone to hospital with you. They can help you talk to the doctor or nurse.

Talking to a counsellor

A counsellor is someone who can help you with your feelings.

If you feel very sad, worried, lonely or angry, talking to a counsellor may help.

You can ask your cancer doctor or GP about seeing a counsellor.

You can find out more about counselling by calling or emailing the organisations listed below. There are also websites you can visit.
